

His LOOK Is His Resume

Spring always brings thoughts of graduation at UW-Madison, and even a perpetual student like Bucky has moments when he thinks about the future.

With all the seniors brushing up their resumes, scanning the want ads, and checking out the listings online, Bucky decided it was time to see what options the professional world might hold for him. What he found was not encouraging. He doesn't have much in the way of marketable skills (there are surprisingly few companies that want to pay someone to dance to "Jump Around"), and the standard job-interview format puts him at a distinct disadvantage. (It's hard to answer a prospective employer's questions when you don't speak at all.) If Bucky ever wants to get a job, he knows he'll have to win it on looks alone. So he went down to his tailor (The Manly Mustelid Big & Tall Shop) to be outfitted in professional style. Doesn't this badger look like executive material?

